NOVA SCOTIA RAINBOW ACTION PROJECT – Megan Leslie Speaks at Anti-Homophobia and Transphobia Rally

HALIFAX - Megan Leslie, Member of Parliament for Halifax, spoke today at a rally held by the Nova Scotia Rainbow Action Project (NSRAP) in recognition of International Day Against Homophobia and Transphobia (IDAHO). The rally was supported by several local organizations.

"In the wake of the recent election, I understand the fears of the lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgendered and queer (LGBTQ) community," said Ms. Leslie. "But I am confident that opposition MPs supported by the community will send a clear message to the Government in Ottawa that Canadians will not tolerate intolerance. And the work of great organizations like NSRAP provides further hope for our community."

Held annually, the rally also featured speeches from local activists, including Hugo Dann and Keith MacMillan. The international struggles of the LGBTQ community and the push to protect transsexual and transgendered people under federal and provincial law were common themes at the event.

A bill to amend the Canadian Human Rights Act and the Criminal Code to prohibit discrimination on the basis of gender identity and gender expression was passed in parliament in 2010. However, when the federal election was called, the bill died in the Senate.

"The fight for LGBTQ rights did not end with marriage," said Lisa Buchanan, executive director of NSRAP. "From Halifax to Uganda, members of our community continue to face inequality, particularly those who identify as transgendered or transsexual. We intend to focus on the discrimination that is prevalent worldwide and offer hope to those who face it at home."

The International Day Against Homophobia and Transphobia is celebrated annually on May 17. This date marks the anniversary of the day that homosexuality was removed from the International Classification of Diseases of the World Health Organization (WHO).
